LARGE DELEGATION FROM WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA WILL ATTEND REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION

CHARLEROI PARTY HEADING "ON TO HARRISBURG" MOVE, TO BE JOINED BY PEOPLE FROM MANY COMMUNITIES

Special Pullman Train Has Been Arranged to Leave Brownsville on Tuesday Morning, June 21

CHARLEROI CONCERT BAND ENGAGED BY COMMITTEE

Charleroi will be very much in evidence at the Republican State convention which convenes in Harrisburg June 22. Inspired by a patriotic and civic sentiment a movement has been started in Charleroi to send a large Western Pennsylvania delegation to attend the convention, at which time candidates for Governor and other State officials will be named. Those interested in the movement have already taken steps in the matter, and a special Pullman train with a band of music has been engaged for the occasion. The excursion will embrace delegations from many places in the Western part of the State, and already a large number are contemplating the trip. The special Pullman train which has been secured will leave Brownsville on Tuesday, June 21, probably some time before noon. It is expected that a party of at least 250 from Charleroi will go, and this party will be joined here and other places by delegations from Beaver, New Brighton, Monongahela, Donora, Brownsville, California, Monessen, Canonsburg, Uniontown, Connellsville, New Castle, Greensburg, Pittsburgh and many other places. A large party is being arranged from Washington to join the Charleroi delegation.

The fare for the round trip, including sleeping accommodations for the two nights there will be but $15.00. W. W. Jimeson is the treasurer of the committee in charge of the train arrangements and anyone who proposes to go should see him about their berth. G. F. Thompson is chairman.

The people of this community are greatly interested in the Republican State convention, and are especially anxious to see good men placed on the ticket for the various important offices to be filled. The local people expect to make a big showing. The Charleroi Concert band is the musical organization which has been engaged, and it has been practicing for a month in anticipation for the trip. It will take 30 pieces.

Although the project is not yet been widely known, the promoters have met with encouragement on every hand, and the movement will be a popular one. The indications are that a large number of enthusiastic Republicans will take advantage of the excursion to attend the convention.

and Seventh street was present and stated that his property was being damaged by a fire plug at that corner. He also said that a bump in the alley at the rear of his property was causing him much trouble by waste flowing into his yard. He stated that waste paper and other articles thrown into the alley had an annoying habit of blowing into his yard, and thought that council should see that people discontinue the practice of dumping waste in the alley. The matters were placed in the hands of the street committee. Council passed a motion to the effect that the Board of Health notify people to not throw paper or waste in the streets or alleys under penalty of the law.

John Cornell was present and asked that an extension be made to a sewer on Third street and Meadow avenue so that the Walton Lumber company might connect with a hall they have there. A petition to have Shady avenue graded was presented by property owners along that street from Third to Fifth street and the matter referred to the street committee for investigation.

M. Wilson was present asking that council take some action on some trouble that he was having with the water company on Lincoln avenue, and the water company representative being present, it was decided to have both attend a meeting later. The water company is said to have opened up a street without a permit to turn

Yours Truly,
Geo. G. Rose, Agent.
Up to this time several hundred people have bought tickets to go to Cascade and the committee had to make extra tickets printed to accommodate those who want to go to Elks outing. This train will make all stops between Brownsville and McKeepoint, as they will take on members and their friends all along the line between the two cities. After leaving McKeepoint there will be no stops made until the park is reached. All who care to go, had better secure their tickets today, in order to give those in charge ample time to secure extra coaches.

Through the readjustment of postmasters' salaries by the postoffice department at Washington, D. C., J. E. McCordle, postmaster at the Charleroi postoffice, has been granted an increase of $100 in his salary, or from $2,400 to $2,500. The salaries are gauged by the amount of business done, and an increase in salary means that there has been a substantial increase in business. There were other increases made in this district.

CONVENTION PROGRAM IS ANNOUNCED

Sunday School Association Will Meet in Washington Next Week.

GOOD SPEAKERS ENGAGED

The Sunday school workers of Washington and the county are expecting a high grade county convention in Washington, June 16-17. Work has been in progress ever since the convention of last year was adjourned at Claysville to make this convention in Washington—one of the very best of its kind the county has known. It will be held in the West Beau street school building.

Grant Colfax Tuller is to have charge of the music. The opening session at 10:30 a. m. "There'll be the children's hour, when Dr. C. H. Woolston, of Philadelphia, will give his famous talk, "That Ship of Mine and Its Wonderful Sails;" an object illustrated lecture. He will speak again the first day in the afternoon, on the "Art of Object Teaching."

Another strong man who will be at this convention will be C. D. Meigs, of Indianapolis, who will give a Bible reading on "How to find the Gold in the Golden Text," and "The Door of the Pupil's Heart and How to Open It." He will also make another address.

Rev. B. W. Hutchinson, formerly of Washington, will present the international diplomas in teacher training.

Talks on topics of interest to workers in the elementary department will be made by Mrs. John Crawford of Bellevue and Mrs. G. H. Thomas of Monessen, formerly of Charleroi. Conferences will again be a feature of the convention, Rev. W. B. Smiley to preside at the pastors' conference, Rev. J. C. Ely, Finleyville, to speak at the intermediate conference, the superintendent's conference to be strictly conference and Miss Jennie Pollock to preside at the home department conference. Teacher training and temperance work will also have conferences.

It is proposed to have a parade of men of the adult Bible classes on Friday evening. On that evening the men will lunch together, then hold a conference and prayer service and then a parade, ending at the school hall, where the State secretary, W. G.

Landis of Philadelphia will address them. At the same time a woman's meeting will be held in the Central Presbyterian church.

Rev. G. G. Kerr of Charleroi is president of the county association, and Mrs. Mary L. Stewart of Washington, is secretary.

Invitations are received by a number of Charleroi people for the wedding of Joseph Harry Rodgers, son of Mrs. Sarah Rodgers of Fallowfield township, and Miss Olive Ruth Seberts, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Seberts of West Liberty, Iowa. The event is to take place at the home of the bride's mother on June 23. Mr. Rodgers is at present employed in the west by a large mining concern as a mining geologist, having offices in Seattle, Wash. The couple will after September make their home in that city. The groom is a graduate of the Charleroi High school of the class of 1896, and of a Western college, and is very popular in this place, and in Fallowfield township.

The Bane of Achesonism.

Many people will cite the negative influence of the Acheson newspapers as an argument in favor of the repeated assertion that the power of newspapers in politics is waning. The Mail is not willing to admit this. Although the support of the Observer and Reporter or even their passive endorsement in the last two campaigns has been fatal, it is believed the effect was not due so much to the voters, disregard of newspaper advocacy.

Two years ago, when the present Congressman, John K. Tener, with no particular ambition for office or political authority, so overwhelmingly defeated the former boss, then Congressman Acheson, and it was found that not only the ex-boss, but every candidate, including those of Assembly and county commissioners, who were supported by his newspapers, were badly beaten, it was pointed out by many that another example of the decreasing power of the press in politics was furnished.

In the primaries just over, every candidate endorsed or approved by these same papers is defeated. D. W. Myers, a former well known county commissioner and a man of standing and ability, and Rufus S. Marriner, who made a favorable impression in his speech making expeditions, could not shake off the stigma of Acheson as evidenced by the approval and endorsement of his newspapers. Both were badly beaten. Frank McClay, the only one of the so-called organization candidates, who is defeated, may charge his loss to the fact that Acheson's papers attacked his associates and rather tentatively endorsed him. Bentley and Anderson, against whom the Acheson papers were the most vicious, surprised even their most sanguine friends with the comparative ease in which they won out.

Ten days ago, it was freely predicted that Hallam would carry the river district. The fact that Acheson's papers advocated his election surely cost him hundreds of votes in this locality. Many people originally friendly to his campaign were heard to remark that he could not possibly be free from the influence of Acheson and have the heavy faced support of the Observer and Reporter as they appeared. Those who are with the winners, refuse to accept that interpretation of these two political struggles; rather to the extreme immodesty of the ex-boss who failed to carry a single ward in his home town; rather to the offensive personality of this perpetual office holder who would either rule or ruin, and who seems to be utterly devoid of fidelity to his dominating and conspicuous influence over these newspapers is inscribed these results, than to the negative power of the press generally to mould public opinion.

The Observer and Reporter are papers of more than ordinary appearance and worth, and until recently their ownership was accredited to men of the very highest standing and affairs in Washington. It is not fair to the newspaper profession to take their political worth in the abstract, although it is regarded as a master stroke of campaigning to procure the antagonism of the ex-boss who cast such an overshadowing predominance upon them.

Faith in Courts.

"If there is any criticism of government by injunction just now it does not proceed from the leaders of organized labor," says the New York World. "The writ served upon the railroads the other day is precisely the same as those against which workingmen complain. It was designed to forestall and forbid a violation of law and to prevent an injury that might not be easy to remedy. The railroads which have attempted to increase rates must appear in court and accept the judgment there pronounced.

"The road to justice is long and rough. When legislators enter new fields they sometimes err through ignorance or rancor. Facts are not always understood, men profoundly interested are not always candid and differences arise which lead to confusion and mischief. Even laws carefully drawn appear to have conflicting provisions and the impatient or the arrogant attempt on occasion to force conclusions for themselves.

"In such emergencies the courts, sitting apart from these rivalries and contentions, have the power to stay proceedings and to determine rights.

In most cases no harm is done by delay. In almost every instance where there is obedience all parties are benefited by the orderly adjudication.

"Great as are the difficulties presented by recent legislation affecting industry, transportation and commerce, there need be no question that in due course the courts will reconcile all conflicts and clear away all doubts.

They are guided not only by law but by precedent. They will solve every one of these problems in harmony with justice, and some of the men who stand agast today will probably be most surprised and pleased at the outcome."

ELECTRIC SPARKS

Ships that pass in the night are becoming airships.

The Washington Observer is so anxious to seemingly support the anti-boozie ticket that it sometimes overlaps itself and find itself occupying an incongruous position on the opposite side of the fence.

Monongahela is beginning to feel that as an old town, and from the fact that it has meditated much upon the advantages to be had from a life residence there, that it has some call to be jealous of Charleroi because this place is to have a new railroad station. We can feel liberal enough to allow them that much.

The reason so many people immigrate from Europe is that they just can't stand it to live there.

Summer has one big disadvantage. With the coming of it, is the arrival of the garbage wagon odor.

The popular idea of a real man is one who after being defeated in a bitterly contested political fight, will go to the ball game with the fellow who beat him.

There is some talk of there being a reduction in the salaries of the grand opera singers. That might be an excellent idea providing that the price of a seat would be slightly decreased at the same time.

A law to punish meanness would be easily made, but to enforce it would be well nigh an impossibility, because of the absence of one who would be entitled to act as an official.

The Lamb's Still a Lamb.

Mary had a little lamb,
But it she could not keep,
For e'er a year had passed away.

It was a great big sheep.
Then a naughty butcher came,
Wise on the art of sham,
And next day on his counter
The sheep again was lamb.

BAPTISTS WALLOP

THE MUCH TOOTED CHRISTIAN TEAM

Leaders Send into Second Place by Substantial Drubbing.

The Baptists administered a good drubbing to the Christians last night, and caused them to drop from first place, where they have been reposing since the league opened. The contest was a good one, and errors were few and far between. The Christians had one bad inning, the fourth, when the Baptists touched up Kiefer for six hits, on which, coupled with two bases on balls and a couple of misplays, they chased around seven runs. The Baptists scored one in the first, when Motts was sent the full count, and the Christians came back with a tally in their half of this inning. They got two in the second on a base on balls, an error, and a single. Kearnes pitched good ball throughout the game, as also did Kiefer with the exception of his one bad inning. The score:

GIVE LODGE

BELONGINGS

The local lodge of Elks have received the pool table and six chairs which was the property of C. H. Chandler who was until his death one of the charter members who instituted this lodge. He was their second exalted ruler and also served one year as district deputy. The gift was made by Mr. Chandler's daughter, Mrs. Genevieve Phipps, and it is needless to say that it will be highly prized by the members as Mr. Chandler was highly esteemed in the order and never did he miss an opportunity of attending an Elks lodge meeting. He was a life member of this lodge.

Committees Hold Meeting

A large and enthusiastic meeting of all committees who have charge of the picnic to be held at Eldora Park June 16 under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus was held in the Business Men's Association room last night. Reports were made by the different chairmen and everything points to this as the best event of the season. The contest for the vacation trips to Atlantic City and Niagara Falls have created intense interest not only in Charleroi, but in all the surrounding towns.

Hon. J. K. Tener has promised the visitors that if they will include Washington, D.C., in their trip he will be glad to introduce them to President Taft. Another contest that is causing a great deal of interest is one in which there are 12 contestants, 12 young ladies selling supper tickets. The two young ladies selling the most tickets will receive a season pass for the Palace and one for the Star Theatre. The season tickets have been donated by Managers R. L. Barnhart, and William H. Crawford of the two theatres. A brass band has been engaged for the day of the picnic and will render selections all day at the park.

They Show That Discontent Has Not Taken Deep Root
in the State

PARTY LINES NOT STRAINED

Hearty Indorsement of Senator Penrose and His Colleagues Is Shown Indications Are That the Democratic Battle Must Go to the Convention.

Precious little comfort is to be gathered by the political discontent or more politely termed the political insurgents from the reports of the primary contests throughout Pennsylvania. Here and there an occasional defender of the regular Republican faith fell in the recent conflict, but in those rather remote instances the voters were simply fooled into following the flag for some harping sycophant whose fantastic platform, glowing with false pretense, deceived a confounding public as a slight-of-hand man deceives and tricks an audience perfectly willing to be lulled. There was but little insurgency manifested anywhere outside of Philadelphia and Allegheny counties and in both these counties the regular organization Republican candidate simply overwhelmed the discontents which meant in the supremacy of the organization in the Keystone State.

There probably is no way to conceal the fact that the entire country is now and for many moons has been suffering from a slight attack of fever in which general unrest and discontent are manifested. The ailment, however, is only debilitating. It is not serious. It has attacked individuals and even communities and in every instance has been played upon by ambitious place hunters who have shown a disposition to take advantage of the afflicted patient for selfish and personal advancement. This peculiar species of fever invariably attacks the poor. The only known remedy is a liberal application of office. The symptoms of the ailment are indicated in unique proclamations, a pretense at reform and particularly a determination to get in.

The result of the recent primaries however, gave rather convincing evidence that the fever was of a mild form and was easily dissipated. Political discontent or insurgency, to be more polite, does not prosper in Pennsylvania. In legislating upon the tariff Congress gave the Pennsylvania wage earner and the wage paying what they most needed and what they most wanted. This fact may have provoked unrest in other and less favored States but it gave the Pennsylvania gamblers little to feed upon and their efforts at the recent primaries indicate that the voters generally are not willing to abandon their party to follow any ambitious place hunter in. Prosperity in the fullest possible measure looks better to the average voter than any alluring promise they have yet heard and they have heard a most insidious bunch of them within the past sixty days.

The regular Republican organization lines were not even strained by the recent contest, although there were in many counties and districts intense rivalry and the indications now are that the party as a whole, without factional differences and without strife, will go into the contest with the common enemy early in the coming fall and will elect as Governor Edwin S. Stuart's successor a Republican after his own heart, with the courage of his convictions—one who will accept the Stuart principles as the main plank in his platform and one who will give to the State an exact duplicate of the Stuart administration.

The cold facts are that the Republican party is doing things and doing them mighty well in State and nation. The so-called Roosevelt policies are being carried out in the United States Congress, the political discontents to the contrary notwithstanding. Offending corporations are being regulated and well regulated at that. The pledges made in the Republican national convention when President Taft was nominated are being redeemed just as the pledges made when Governor Stuart was elected have been redeemed to the letter. Discontent does not grow out of good faith. Only real good may be accomplished by complete organization. Hear what President Taft said recently of the Republican party and its organization:

"One of the characteristics of the Republican party is its ability to do things. Now I do not say that as an idle boast, but if you can point to a party in England or a party in the United States that has had the issues to meet that the Republican party has met and that has met them with the success and effectiveness of the Republican party I would be glad to have you name it. It is true that the time seemed to produce the man for every emergency, but behind that man, organized to hold up his hands, was the Republican party in every issue and every exigency."

In the very nature of things political the returns from the recent primaries must be gratifying to the Republican leaders in this State. The result was a sweeping and emphatic endorsement of United States Senator Boies Penrose and his colleagues in the United States Congress and in the leadership of the Republican party in the State. But on the other hand, what of Democracy? The returns so far show that party are concerned are threatening to all the Democratic bosses. The Bryan wing of the party is confident that enough delegates were chosen to control the coming Democratic State convention which would mean the unhooking of Colonel J. M. Guffey as the Democratic boss of the State and the nomination of W. H. Berry, the Bryan candidate for Governor. The Guffey contingent is just as confident that the organization Democrats have elected a majority of the delegates which would mean the wiping out of the last remnant of the Bryan crowd in Pennsylvania and the nomination of Colonel Guffey's candidate for Governor whenever he may be. The official returns, however, will be necessary to determine the result of the Democratic contest and the only official forecast now possible is a positive assurance that the fight for extermination in the Democratic ranks will go on to Allentown where the State convention of the untrified is called to appear a trifle more than two weeks hence.

There the Guffey crowd will enjoy a Roman holiday and will spread a Bryan barbecue or the Bryan band will pull the tail feathers out of the American eagle and will offer Colonel Guffey and his organization followers as a sacrifice to the white sepulcher from Nebraska. The Republican quarrel has been adjusted by the voters so far as the naked eye can see. The Democratic battle, like the Brook goes on forever with a large and enthusiastic audience applauding.

BELLS OF THE BASTILLE.

They Are Hung in a Little Rustic Building in Paris.

The bells of the Bastille are still in Paris in a little court in Avenue d'Eylau, where they are hung in a little rustic building. There is no doubt as to their authenticity. They carry in relief their story. "These three bells were made by Louis Cheron, founder to the court, for the royal Bastille in the year 1761." Fleurs-de-lis, crosses and sacred figures adorn the legend. The bells formerly were part of the clock installed by M. Sartine in 1764. In the archives de l'arsenal are all the documents relative to the work.

On July 14, 1789, the bells of the assailants stopped the clock of the Bastille at a quarter past 5 in the evening. Palley, who demolished the prison, three days later received the order to deliver the clock to the commander of the Paris militia, who transported it to one who knew whither. After the revolution the bells were found at the foundries of Rouilly-sur-Andelle. In Eure, where, under the reign of terror, the church bells were converted into money. The proprietor of the foundry was interested in these relics and did not melt them. He installed the three bells in his works with the movement of the clock. By this time the dial plate had disappeared and the figures which belonged to it. Some years ago the bells were transferred from the Rouilly foundry to Paris, and there they have since remained.—London Globe.

Particular Points.
"Shall I touch out the wrinkles in your face?" asked the photographer.
"By all means," answered the elderly beau. "And also those, if there be any, in my trousers."—Kansas City Journal.

Bliss.
"Lysander" (sweetly), "do you know what day this is?"
"Sure! Our anniversary, Margaret, dear" (pretending to have remembered it all the time).
"No such thing" (frigidly). "It's the day you promised to nail the leg on that old kitchen table."

Lysander paled, tried to square himself on the anniversary blunder, failed utterly, and the fireworks were on.

THE WHOLE ORCHESTRA.

Man Not Even the Second Fiddle Nor Drummer.

Professor Emil Reich in his work on "Woman Through All the Ages" definitely insinuates that in American life she is "the whole orchestra." He says:

"These women—the American maid and wife—are fundamentally different from their sisters in Europe, whether in the past or present. Far from taking the slightest interest in man, they look down upon him. Man in America plays neither first nor second fiddle. He does not even beat the drum. He is the mere lampighter of the orchestra of life in the United States.

"Nothing is more common in the States than to be asked by one of their bright women: 'How do you do this or that thing? What trick have you for doing it?' In their minds, in their innermost minds, they are firmly convinced that  all the great artists have their 'tricks' with which they work upon the audience. In native elemental talent they do not believe at all. How could they? They have themselves not the trace of such talent. There are over 12,000,000 pianos in American houses, used mostly by women, yet there is not a single American pianiste of even the third order. There are thousands of schools for American women, yet there is not a single American woman of note as a scholar.

I candidly state that the American woman is not and cannot be anything like the type of womanhood that, from the Hellenes downward, all European nations have considered as the right model. Women then in America cannot develop and have never developed that peculiar charm of either beauty or grace that in Europe has always been held to be the greatest power of women.

The last word, then, in American womanhood is this, that they represent actually what the ancient Greek myths (if myths they be) represented symbolically—a realm of amazons grafted upon a realm of man. The old Greek amazon is, indeed, the evil archetypal of the woman of the United States.

Sustaining Life.

Mrs. Andrew Cross in her "Reminiscences" describes an old nurse born at Broomfield, England, who lived to be nearly a hundred. "All her life she had eaten a few bit and breakfast, a stay bit and dinner, a noumet and crummet and a bit after supper, eight meals in all. Besides this it was her invariable custom to mix together all the doctors' stuff left after any illness in the house and swallow it on the principle that what had cost money should not be wasted."

Buying by Moonlight.
"I made a quiet trip one night no long ago," said the agent of a cemetery company. "I went out to the cemetery after dark with a prospective customer so she could see how the burial lot under consideration looked by moonlight. The lady was of a romantic turn of mind. She had taken a fancy to a plot on a little knoll overlooking the lake, but before closing the deal she insisted upon seeing the effect of the moonbeams on the water and surrounding landscape. I had sold many lots under peculiar circumstances, but that particular phase of our business was something new. The lady seemed to derive considerable satisfaction from it. Anyway, she bought the lot."—New York Press.

A Neat Selection.

"That's a nice umbrella you have there."

"Ain't it? Reflects credit on my taste, doesn't it?"

"It certainly does. Where did you get it?"

"Picked it out of a bunch of seven that were standing in the boarding house hall this morning."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

New Reporter's Experience.
The reporter was not only young and green at the business, but he was unmarried. He had covered a district for the first time with a man who knew the ropes so well that he could have gone over the ground and scented news with his eyes shut.

Not wishing to appear new at the game, when the young man started out on the second day, on coming out from the magistrate's hearings at one of the police courts he clambered into the patrol wagon as he had seen his guide do on the day before and seated himself beside half a dozen prisoners who were being taken to city ball for further examination. Suddenly remembering that he had a story to look up a few squares away, he jumped out of the patrol wagon to the ground. Before he could take a step the policeman standing guard, who had never laid eyes on him before, seized him and pushed him roughly into his seat again. The frightened boy started to explain, but the patrolman, bent on the stern exercise of duty, only added to his terror by saying: "Up to the hell for yours. This is the second time your wife's sworn out that warrant above—Philadelphia Ledger.

The police card, which the would-be reporter had not thought of before, relieved a somewhat tense situation, and another minute he was on his way to the scene of a robbery in the street above—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Flying Hours.
Twelve little birds fly by in a row—
Bright little birds are they,
Shining and free and as blue as can be—
And these are the hours of the day,
The sun shines warmly across their wings.

As they flit their way along,
And now and again in their joy of things
They sing a daytime song.

Twelve little ones fly by in a row—
Silent and dark their flight,
Gray little things with shadowy wings,
And these are the hours of the night,
But the last of them all as he hovers low
Is flushed with a radiant pink.

This is the good little sunrise owl.

I like him the best, I think.

LOVE'S COUSING.

A Phase of Marriage Which Very Many Women Forget

The only 30 years I can recollect our happiness were sudden and inexplicable "flare ups." Occasionally, to our amazement, a smile would dart and glint at each other like lightning bolts; speak little. Five minutes later we would expire in silent despair. Soon I discovered that those qualities were due to us, and to the trials of adjustment. One evening we had an argument that was particularly violent and distressing. It ended in Frank's going to bed. I remained in the seat where I had been reading, and for a long time I pretended to myself that I was going on reading. Presently tears fell on my book. Then I said "How silly all this is! I am making myself suffer, and I am making Frank suffer too. I will go and tell him that I am sorry." So I stole into the bed room. He was sleeping peacefully.

That little experience, not without humor as I look back on it, made me first realize how differently Frank and I could be affected by the same cause. It marked the beginning of my meanness. Soon I stopped reading aloud to Frank; why, I can't remember. Little things disturbed me. At first I thought of them used to be swept away by my delight on seeing Frank in the evening. Then, too, there would come the feeling that those things were accidents and would not occur again. In the second year of our marriage, just after dinner, Frank would read the newspaper till he began to doze. Then he would rouse himself and try to be agreeable. The effort troubled me. There was also the quiet and efficient deciding of little details without reference to my wishes. And here I felt there was danger. Once I said to myself, "Suppose I should tire him." Then I rowed on. Then I thought of the moment when I should discover that I was tiring him. Here my sense of humor came to my rescue, and I left off. I imagine that many women pass through this phase.

Check Protection

One of the chief arguments in favor of paying by check is a guard against over payment.

It is therefore a greater protection for funds than paying in cash, besides saving much time and expense. Your account subject to check is cordially invited.

The Bane of Achesonism.

Many people will cite the negative influence of the Acheson newspapers as an argument in favor of the repeated assertion that the power of newspapers in politics is waning.
The Mail is not willing to admit this.
Although the support of the Observer and Reporter or even their passive endorsement in the last two campaigns has been fatal, it is believed the effect was not due so much to the voters, disregard of newspaper advocacy.
Two years ago, when the present Congressman, John K. Tenex, with no particular ambition for office or political authority, so overwhelmingly defeated the former boss, then Congressman Acheson, and it was found that not only the ex-boss, but every candidate, including those of Assembly and county commissioners, who were supported by his newspapers, were badly beaten, it was pointed out by many that another example of the decreasing power of the press in politics was furnished.

In the primaries just over, every candidate endorsed or approved by these same papers is defeated. D. W.

Myers, a former well known county commissioner and a man of standing and ability, and Rufus S. Marriner, who made a favorable impression in his speech making expeditions, could not shake off the stigma of Acheson as evidenced by the approval and endorsement of his newspapers. Both were badly beaten. Frank McClay, the only one of the so-called organization candidates, who is defeated, may charge his loss to the fact that Acheson's papers attacked his associates and rather tentatively endorsed him. Bentley and Anderson, against whom the Acheson papers were the most vicious, surprised even their most sanguine friends with the comparative ease in which they won out.

Ten days ago, it was freely predicted that Hallam would carry the river district. The fact that Acheson's papers advocated his election surely cost him hundreds of votes in this locality. Many people originally friendly to his campaign were heard to remark that he could not possibly be free from the influence of Acheson and have the heavy faced support of the Observer and Reporter as they appeared. Those who are with the winners, refuse to accept that interpretation of these two political struggles; rather to the extreme im-modesty of the ex-boss who failed to carry a single ward in his home town:
rather to the offensive personality of this perpetual office holder who would either rule or ruin, and who seems to be utterly devoid of fidelity to his dominating and conspicuous influence over these newspapers is inscribed these results, than to the negative power of the press generally to mould public opinion.

The Observer and Reporter are papers of more than ordinary appearance and worth; and until recently their ownership was accredited to men of the very highest standing and affairs in Washington. It is not fair to the newspaper profession to take their political worth in the abstract; although it is regarded as a master stroke of campaigning to procure the antagonism of the ex-boss who cast such an overshadowing predominance upon them.

Faith in Courts.

"If there is any criticism of 'government by injunction' just now it does not proceed from the leaders of organized labor," says the New York World. "The writ served upon the railroads the other day is precisely the same as those against which workingmen complain. It was designed to forestall and forbid a violation of law and to prevent an injury that might not be easy to remedy.
The railroads which have attempted to increase rates must appear in court and accept the judgment there pronounced.

"The road to justice is long and rough. When legislators enter new fields they sometimes err through ignorance or malice. Facts are not always understood, men profoundly interested are not always candid and differences arise which lead to confusion and mischief. Even laws carefully drawn appear to have conflicting provisions and the impatient or the arrogant attempt on occasion to force conclusions for themselves.

"In such emergencies the courts, sitting apart from these rivalries and contentions, have the power to stay proceedings and to determine rights.
In most cases no harm is done by delay. In almost every instance where there is obedience all parties are benefited by the orderly adjudication.
"Great as are the difficulties presented by recent legislation affecting industry, transportation and commerce, there need be no question that in due course the courts will reconcile all conflicts and clear away all doubts.
They are guided not only by law but by precedent. They will solve every one of these problems in harmony with justice, and some of the men who stand aghast today will probably be most surprised and pleased at the outcome."

With some men slamming the doors

ing does to others.

Ships that pass in the night are

The Washington Observer is so anxious to seemingly support the anti-boozie ticket that it sometimes overlaps itself and find itself occupying an incongruous position on the opposite side of the fence.

Monongahela is beginning to feel that as an old town, and from the fact that it has meditated much upon the advantages to be had from a life residence there, that it has some call to be jealous of Charleroi because this place is to have a new railroad station. We can feel liberal enough to allow them that much.

The reason so many people immigrate from Europe is that they just can't stand it to live there.

Summer has one big disadvantage.
With the coming of it, is the arrival of the garbage wagon odor.

The popular idea of a real man is one who after being defeated in a bitterly contested political fight, will go to the ball game with the fellow who beat him.

Glasses which make a man see

They may be beer mugs or whiskey glasses.

There is some talk of there being a reduction in the salaries of the grand opera singers. That might be an excellent idea providing that the price of a seat would be slightly decreased at the same time.

A law to punish meanness would be easily made, but to enforce it would be well nigh an impossibility, because of the absence of one who would be entitled to act as an official.

CHRISTIAN TEAM

Leaders Send into Second Place by Substantial

Drubbing.

The Baptists administered a good drubbing to the Christians last night, and caused them to drop from first place, where they have been reposing since the league opened. The contest was a good one, and errors were few and far between. The Christians had one bad inning, the fourth, when the Baptists touched up Kiefer for six hits, on which, coupled with two bases on balls and a couple of misplays, they chased around seven runs. The Baptists scored one in the first, when Motts was sent the full count, and the Christians came back with a tally in their half of this inning. They got two in the second on a base on balls, an error, and a single. Kearnes pitched good ball throughout the game, as also did Kiefer with the exception of his one bad inning.

"I made a queer trip one night not long ago," said the agent of a cemetery company. "I went out to the cemetery after dark with a prospective customer so she could see how the burial lot under consideration looked by moonlight. The lady was of a nervous turn of mind. She had taken a fancy to a plot on a little knoll overlooking a lake, but before closing the deal she insisted upon seeing the effect of the moonbeams on the water and surrounding landscape. I had seen many lots under peculiar circumstances, but that poetic phase of our business was something new. The lady seemed to derive considerable satisfaction from it. FATHER OF LOCAL MERCHANT DIES ON HIS RETURN HOME

John Kirk Sr., 80 years old, the father of William Kirk, the senior member of the firm of Kirk and Clark of Charleroi, died at his home in Beaver Falls this morning at 11:10 o'clock, from complaints due to old age. He is survived by four sons and three daughters. The sons are William of Charleroi, John K., Jr., of Scotland, Archibald and Thomas L. of Beaver Falls. The daughters are Mrs. W. C. Clark of Charleroi and Misses Sarah and Ellen at home.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed as yet.

Mr. Kirk visited in Charleroi at the home of his son and his daughter some time ago, and went home only recently, seemingly in perfect health. He is quite well known in town, where his friends regret to hear of his demise.

LOVE'S DOUBTING.

A Phase of Life Through Which Many Married Women Pass.

The only incidents that marred our happiness were sudden and unexpected "flare-ups." Grossly ugly, a little would make us glare at each other like animals who speak barks. The minor flare-ups would express a desire and shew soon I perceived that these quarrels were due to a few words and to the trials of adjustment. One evening we had an argument that was particularly violent and distressing. It ended by Frank's going to bed. I remained in the seat where I had been reading, and for a long time I pretended to myself that I was going on reading. Presently tears fell on my book. Then I said "How silly all this is! I am making myself suffer, and I am making Frank suffer too. I will go and tell him that I am sorry." So I stole into the bed room. He was sleeping peacefully.

That little experience, not without humor as I look back on it, made me first realize how differently Frank and I could be affected by the same cause. It marked the beginning of my uneasiness. Soon I stopped reading aloud—Frank, why, I can't remember. Little things disturbed me. At first the thought of them used to be swept away by my delight on seeing Frank in the evening. Then, too, there would come the feeling that those things were accidents and would not occur again. In the second year of our marriage, just after dinner, Frank would read the newspaper till he began to doze. Then he would rouse himself and try to be agreeable. The effort troubled me. There was also the quiet and efficient deciding of little details without reference to my wishes. And here I felt there was danger. Once I said to myself, "Suppose I should tire him," and I rowed out. Then I thought of the moment when I should discover that I was tiring him. Here my sense of humor came to my rescue, and I felt better. I imagine that many women pass through this phase—American Magazine.

A CHINESE WEDDING.

As Solemn as a Funeral, With the Women All Weeping.

A Chinese marriage is all ceremony—no talk, no woe and much crying. The solemnity of a funeral prevails. After the exchange of presents the bride is dressed with much care in a red gown, brocade or silk if she can get it; her eyelashes are painted a deep black, and she wears a heavy red veil attached to a scarlet headdress, from which imitation pearls are pendent over the forehead.

A feast is spread upon a table, to which the blushing bride is led by one of her best female friends. They are seated at the table, but no one eats. The utmost silence prevails, when finally the mother leads off in a cry, the maidens follow, and the bride echoes in the chorus. Then all the bridesmaids leave the table, and the disconsolate mother takes a seat beside the chair of state where the bride sits.

The bridegroom now enters, with four of his best men. The men pick up the throne on which the bride sits and, preceded by the bridegroom, form in procession and walk around the room or into an adjoining parlor, signifying that he is carrying her away to his own home. The guests then throw rice at the happy couple, a custom we have borrowed from the heathen.—St. James' Gazette.

CHEST NOTES.

Varying Sounds That May Be Heard Through the Stethoscope.

The doctor hears some curious noises when he places the stethoscope against your chest. When the lungs are in a healthy condition the medical gentleman hears a pleasant breezy sound, soft in tone, as you draw in the breath and expel it. Should the instrument convey to his ear a gurgling or bubbling sound he makes a mental note of the fact that you are in what is known as the moist stage of bronchitis. In the dry stage of the same complaint the sound is a whistling, wheezy one.

One of the signs of pneumonia is the crackling note that comes through the stethoscope. It is not unlike the sound that can be heard when your finger and thumb have touched a sticky substance and you first place them together and then part them, holding them close to your ear.

Doctors occasionally hear a dripping sound, and that indicates that air and water have got into some part of the chest where they have no right to be. Blow across a bottle, and you will produce a sound which is actually to be heard in your chest. It is caused in the same way—that is, by air passing over a cavity.

Filipino Buglers.

"Speaking of buglers," says Boatman Juraschka in his article, "Captains of Filipinos," in Wide World Magazine, "It astonished me to find that the insurgents had so many buglers and that many of them were of the best. They knew all our army calls, although they did not know their significance. I was often asked the meaning of various calls and was careful to give them any but the proper one. One insurgent colonel asked me what call was sounded as the retreat from the charge. I told him that we had no such call, but that the charge once sounded, American soldiers and sailors went through or never came back. He was very much interested and with good reason, as he had just escaped from the attack of our men at Dilo and could well believe it. He said that charging was unfair—that both sides should simply snipe at each other."

So He Would.

A little country girl visited city relatives who dwelt in a flat. Her visit lasted two weeks, and all of the time they were warning her not to make so much noise, not to run across the street and not to wake the people in the adjoining flats. In fact, they were constantly curtailing her freedom. When she got home she told her papa she never wanted to go to the city again, and he said:

"You must have had a hard time of it. You do look hollow eyed."

"Well, papa," she said, "if you had folks hollerin' at you all the time you'd look hollow eyed too."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Not Ambiguous at All.

In one of England's elections a candidate for parliament, the late Lord Bath, called attention to himself by means of a doukey, over whose back two panniers were slung bearing a ribbon band on which was printed "Vote For Papa." It must be added, however, that in each pannier stood one of Lord Bath's daughters.

Sightseeing.

On a visit to his grandmother Harry examined her handsome furniture with interest and then asked, "Grandma, where is the miserable table that grandma always keeps?"—Success Magazine.

An Extremist.

A London bookseller recently received this order from a customer: "Please forward me a copy of Tennyson's poems. Do not send one bound in calf, however, because I am a vegetarian."

Good Reason.

"Here's the doctor again, miss. Don't you think he comes more often than he needs to?"

"It all depends. He may be very poor, Marie."—Frou-Frou.

Think not that thy word and thine alone must be right.—Sophocles.

THE UMPIRE.

Did You Ever Hear the Fans Cheer Him For His Work?

There is one unique phase connected with the life of the umpire which perhaps has never occurred to most lovers of baseball. You have often been to a theater and seen the hero or heroine—yes, even the villain—win round after round of applause for some excellent bit of acting.

You have been to a football game and heard some ball gladiators cheered to the echo for making a long run that resulted in a touchdown or for a flying tackle that prevented imminent defeat. When some player is injured they convey their sympathy to him by cheering his name.

You have been to a ball game and heard the fans cheer some crack pitcher because in a pinch he fanned some mighty batter. It's just the natural way of the American to show admiration and appreciation.

Rack your brain, think your hardest, recall every game you have ever attended, then see if you can remember a time when the umpire drew applause for his work. Have you ever heard the fans cheer the name of the umpire after he has worked a fifteen inning game which fairly bristled with close and narrow plays and got away without a kick? If you can recall such an incident, just dot it down in your notebook that you were present at a very, very unusual happening.

Do they cheer the umpire's name when he stops a foul tip with his shin or has a swift shot bounced off his mask? Yes, they do—not. Any injury to the umpire usually gets a round of derisive laughter from the crowd. Generally, if he has been going bad, some leather lunged individual requests that he be killed or chloroformed. Of course there are many people in the stands who sympathize with the umpire. Their sympathy is usually silence. That isn't much harm to his injury or feelings.

Applause would sound so strange to an umpire's ears that he would probably become so thoroughly frightened he would jump the back fence.—Billy Evans in New York Tribune.

THE TELESCOPE.

Galilei's Rude Instrument the First Used in Astronomy.

The first telescope was pointed toward the sky on Jan. 7, 1610, when Galilei first tried his rude instrument and was rewarded by discovering some of the moons of Jupiter. No great magnifying power was needed for this, as at least one of the moons is large enough to be seen by the naked eye. Did not the nearness of the brilliant planet prevent this. Lenses had been known for a long time and were at that time in common use by near-sighted persons.

The name of the real discoverer of the telescope seems to be unknown, but the accepted story now is that two young sons of a Middebury optician named Lippersey some time between 1605 and 1608, while playing with some lenses, happened to hold two of them at a distance from each other and were surprised and delighted to find that the weather vane on a neighboring tower seemed to come near them when looked at through the two lenses. In April, 1609, a little telescope made in Holland was offered for sale in Paris.

The next month Galilei, then a professor in the university at Padua, heard of this instrument and realized at once its importance in the study of astronomy. From the description of the Dutch instrument he had one made at once, and in August he astounded the people of Venice by showing them from the top of the campanile persons entering the doors of the church at Murano. This spyglass was less than two inches in diameter and magnified three times. From this crude instrument of Galilei to the monster telescopes forty inches in diameter of the present day is the development of only three centuries. Argonaut.

An Interruption.

Among the primary pupils enrolled in a Baltimore school is the son of a prominent business man of that city, says Harper's Magazine. One afternoon at close of school the youngster sought out his father in his office, to whom he said:

"Dad, I'm getting tired of school. I think I'll quit."

"Why," asked the astonished parent, "what's the matter, Tommy? I thought you were fond of going to school."

"So I am, dad," responded the youngster, suppressing a yawn, "but it breaks up the day so."

His Opening Break.

A congressman had returned to his constituency to deliver a carefully prepared address. The day arrived, and loosening the first button of his Prince Albert, he uttered his carefully prepared prefatory remarks, and to this day he cannot understand the ripple of laughter which swept over his audience when he uttered his opening sentence. "Before I begin to speak to you I desire to say something." He said it.—Kansas City Star.

On the Way.

"I understand that you owe everything to your wife," said the tactless relative.

"No," answered Mr. Meekton, "but I will if I don't stop playing bridge with her and her mother."

Her Slip.

He—Do you think I were to kiss your dog would bite me? She—Well—er—he's never done it to any one before.

JUNE ON THE GREAT LAKES

Restful, delightful, interesting and instructive, there is no trip like that on the Great Lakes, those inland seas which form the border line between the United States and Canada. And June is one of the most charming months in the year in which to take the trip.

For comfort the fine passenger steamships of the Anchor Line have no superiors. As well appointed as the palatial ocean greyhounds which plow the Atlantic, their schedule allows sufficient time at all stopping places to enable the traveler to see something of the great lake cities and to view in daylight the most distinctive sights of the lakes, and the scenery which frames them.

The trip through the Detroit River, and through Lake St. Clair, with its great ship canal in the middle of the lake, thence through Lake Huron, the locking of the steamer through the great locks at the Soo, and the passage of the Portage Entry, lake and canal, across the upper end of Michigan are novel and interesting features.

The voyage from Buffalo to Duluth covers over eleven hundred miles in the five days journey. Leaving Buffalo, the steamships Juniata, Tionesta and Octorara, make stops at Erie, Cleveland, Detroit, Mackinac Island, the Soo, Marquette, Houghton and Hancock, and Duluth.

The 1910 season opened on May 31, when the Steamer Tionesta made her first sailing from Buffalo.

The Anchor Line is the Great Lake Annex of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the service measures up to the high standard set by the "Standard Railroad of America."

An illustrated folder, giving sailing dates of steamers, rates of fare, and other information is in course of preparation, and may be obtained when ready from any Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agent, who is also prepared to book passengers who may desire to take this trip through the Great Lakes and back.

YOUR MEMORY.

If It Seems to Fail You Just Give It a Good Jogging.

Memory does not "fail" (except in loss of all the faculties); it simply gets weak and languid for want of use, just as the physical organs do. People often say "My memory is failing" when it is really as good as ever if they would give it a chance.

A word, a date, a name, an incident comes up, or, rather, fails to come up when you want it. There seems to be no possible way of remembering it. You make two or three efforts, give up and say, "There's no use; it's gone from me."

Nonsense! It hasn't. It is there just as much as it ever was, only there are a lot of things over it. Keep at work, bring your will to bear upon it, try and try and try, and after awhile you can get it.

And, better, you will find that the exercise required in remembering it will help you next time and that a little toil and determination put together will accomplish wonders in the whole range of faculties.

Look over your memory, see where you are most deficient and exercise it in that respect. You can do it at any odd time, while you are walking, riding, resting after a day's work, listening perforce to a dull speaker. Don't let a few failures discourage you. The long corridor of recollection lined upon both sides with valuable material will be opened for you because of your impunity if you use it.—Exchange.

Fair, but Stormy.

A gentleman boarded the Karori car at Kelburne Avenue. Recognizing a friend on one of the seats, he nodded pleasantly and then said, "Well, what do you think of the weather?"

"Oh, horrible!" was the reply.

"And how is your wife today?"

"She's just about the same, thank you!"—New Zealand Free Lance.

BARGAIN HUNTING.

The Strenuous National Game of the American Women.

There is always something impressive about a crowd that is swayed by a single emotion. You get an impression of force, says Mary Eaton Vorse in Success Magazine. These women, who a few moments ago had been quiet shoppers, formed a mob. They swayed and pushed as though moved by a common impulse toward a table where were the embroideries. From their throats came a little dull growl, a curious noise—the whisper of a mob.

The noise of a mob in joy or in anger or in fright or just its restless murmur as it waits is different from any other noise that comes from the human throat—quite distinct, of a curious animal timber. I heard it once on the occasion of the throwing of a bomb, again from a crowd waiting for a bank to open and a third time in a theater when the bad had been called, and now here it was in miniature from a couple of hundred women waiting to buy ten cent embroideries.

They were poor women with shawls and baskets, women with babies in their arms, women with threadbare clothes carefully brushed, who must think before spending each dime in the dollar, but for once indulging in the great sport of American women—bargain hunting.

The Word "Beifry."

The word "beifry" had originally no connection with "bell," an idea which is now intimately associated with the term. The first meaning given is "watchtower," from the Middle English "beifry," a watchtower. The first part of this word is connected with "borough," the second with "free." As the practice grew of banging "bells" in such towers people reminded themselves of the fact by changing the word "beifry" into the modern "bell."

Fashions In Borneo.

According to the rules of Borneo's fashion it is deemed necessary to mold one's limbs into a more shapely form than that bestowed by nature. This is done really effectively by winding strong brass wire round the ankles, the wrists, under the knees and above the elbows of children. Growth at these points is, in consequence, greatly hampered with the result that the limbs come to be deformed or, according to Drak ideas brought into proper shape. The headdress consists of a curious headwear cap, and around his neck a broadgroom to be worn in bunches of plaited fiber and strings of cowrie shells. These shells, by the way, as in other parts of the world are used as currency. A yard of fiber or twine to thirty cowrie shells represent the value of a penny. The white armlets are made of another species of shells—Wide World Magazine.

What a Toad Enjoys.
There are few things more amusing than to watch a toad submittng to the operations of a back scratching. He will at first look somewhat suspiciously at the twig which you are advancing toward him, but after two or three passes down his back his manner undergoes a marked change. His eyes close with an expression of infinite rapture. He plays his feet wider apart, and his body extends to nearly double its ordinary size, as if to obtain by these means more room for enjoyment. Thus he will remain until you make some sudden movement which startles him or until he has had as much perking as he wants. When, with a puff of regretful delight, he will reduce himself to his usual dimensions and hop away, bent once more on the pleasures of the chase.

In Hearing

They stood upon the crest of the mountain and gazed off through the purple distances.

"Darling," he whispered bending closer, "give me a kiss—just one!"

"No, Clarence," she answered timidly: "some one will hear us. There may be other ears around."

"Other ears? Who should you think so, dearest?"

"Oh, because I have so often heard of mountaineers I thought perhaps there might be some around, and—"

But just then there was a mighty crash. A mountain goat had heard the awful pun and jumped over the cliff.—London Tatler

The Oldest Reliable Date.

It used to be supposed that the most ancient civilization of which real records had been found dated from B.C. 3500. This bad relation to Peru and its earliest known inhabitants, but Dr. Eduard Meyer, professor of ancient history at the University of Berlin, studying the Egyptian calendar on the monuments in the state museum of the German capital, discovered that the date B.C. 4241 is frequently cited as that in which the early Egyptian astronomers first calculated their solar year from the rising of the star Sirius. This is by far the oldest reliable date in the history of the human race.
